The editor of the Louisville Journa is of course delighted with the aid his Abolition brother, Gregg, has furnished him. The editor could be equal to the most accomplished, without help, but his readers know his character for lying so well that his offerts have been of little avail, so he has got the help of one at least as willing to lie as himself, but whose propensity in that line is not so well known here as that of the editor of the Journal. Tais tellow Gregg, of the Tribune, came to our office only a few days ago for a favor and get it. Ine speak had not more than gotten fairly home till he published a lie about us; probably consected it with the editor of the Journal bettere he left here. He lays his lie upon a respectable citizen; but no respectable citizen ever gave him such information. Respectable citizen don't suvent hes and propagate them.

There is not a man, living or dead, who ever heard us mention the subject of slavery in a public address in the State of Indiana. We challenge the man to be produced. This is the truth, and we defy contradiction from any respectable source. For most of the time we lived in Indiana the question of slavery was not even a subject of private conversation; n.body thought of it. It came in the way at Hanover College, by the conduct of an emissary of the Abolition Society, about the last year of our connection with that institution. The faculty suppressed the subject in the College, and had some trouble in suppressing a mob, camposed of students and citizens of the place. Nobody had any temptation to be an Abolitionist at that period in Indiana, for the individhands. If we had ever assumed the responsibility of giving our matured opinious about slavery twenty years ago, all creation might be welcome to read them, however crude and erroneous they might be; but as we never did, and no man who sets any value upon his character for veracity will is anti-foreign or anti-l'ope, or whether he is any ol assert that we did, we shall only denounce the lying Abolition hounds who spewed out their falsehoods to help out their Abolition brother of the Journal, who has been for a quarter of a century an emissary to Abolitionize Kentucky.

A shameless avowal of the editor of the Jonrnal the other day, about the Nativeism of the Whig party in past years, tempted us to look over his files of a few years ago, and let our readers see how utterly unscrupulous he is. The Threatened Diplomatic Rupture between Great Britain and the U.S. STRONG OPPOSITION TO WAR.

THE UNITED STATES AND ENGLAND There was, at the time of the sailing of th teamer, a good deal of excitement in Great Brit-in, on the subject of war with the United States was again reported on Liverpool Change tha Mr. Buchanan had demanded his passports, and his absence from Lady Palmerston's soirce was at-mbuted to the personal missuderstanding between Lord Clarendon and himself, (to which reference was made in last dispatch from Halifax). We have no particulars of the reported misunderstanding, as the English papers maintain complete silence on the subject. Clarendon is, however, reported to have spoken in a most imperious manner to Mr. Joehanan, waich Mr. B. promptly checked by losing the interview. It is stated that the Derby arty intend to bring forward a motion in Parlianent on the subject of the omission of all aliusion o America in the Queen's speech. It is also stated hat England and France have jointly sent envoy-Brazil, to enlist that country against the intests of the United States in Central America cantime the general tone of the Luglish pross reatening and presumptuous towards the United tates. The purely commercial presses form a xception, and the Champers of Commerce lanchester and Liverpool protest against any in-cruption of amouble relations. In a funds have sen depressed, and are ansettled by the threatning as ect of affairs.

The London Morning Advertiser asserts that Sir eary Bulwer, in concert with a member of l'arlianent of great diplomatic experience, is endeavor-ng to arrive at a solution which may be more ac-aptable to both countries than the plan of arbitraion. This interference, in a non-official capacity, axes place at the instigation of Lord Palmerston an interview was to take place at the Embassy, then Sir Henry Bulwer would explain at lengt o Mr. Bachansa the compromise water he is propared to recommend. ENGLISH CHAMBERS OF COMPERCE ON AMERICAN

The Chairman of the Liverpool Chamber of commerce, at the annual meeting of the Cham er, spoke in strong terms against any interruption I friendly relations between the two countries. Other members expressed the same sentiments, bu ae Chamber did not adopt a formal resolution of no subject.

The Manchester Chamber of Commerce held its onnual meeting, Monray the 4th, when the tellow-ing resolution, prepared by John Bright, M. I'... was moved by the Mayer of Manchester, and unan nously adopted:

Resolved, That this Chamber has observed with op regret that difficulties have arisen between ne Brush Government and the Covernment of the United States, with regard to the censtruc-tion of a treaty on the subject of Central America, and to attempts which are alleged to have been made to enlish men for the Brush army within the jurisdiction of the United States : this Unamer would argently impress upon the Government f this country the propriety of considering the uestions in a conclusiony spirit, with a strong de mination to spare alike to the United King which must arise from any interruption of the nicable relations between the two countries Mr. Bright made a speech of some length, from which we make the idlowing extracts: JOHN ERIGHT, M.P., ON ARLENCAN RELATIONS. "Lord Clarendon was willing to put it to asbi stration was difficult. It the arostration were to coide whether the treaty was as the English covernment said it was, or whether it was as the nerican Government said it was, then the Ame ican Government would give notice and abandor he treaty, because they would nover consent that ne protectorate and occupation of England hould continue while they understood it should e abclished, and still adnere to a treaty which said they should never occupy; and therefore the and would be, that the treaty would be at an end, and things would be just as if it had never been nade, and the result would be that the United States, being on the spot, as compared with thi ountry, would be pushing some way or otherr very just -- in that direction, and tuero could be o doubt that, whether we went to war or not, our idren would had tast the whole of these cories were either in the actual possession or nader ne dominant influence of the United States of merica, and nothing we could ever do could pre-

It was quite clear that our Government was wrong, but the Americans said we had not made atonement sufficient. Mr. Crampton and obviously violated the laws of the United States; they could not bentsh Mr. Crampton, because it we contrary to the rules of international proceedings out his influence for good must necessitive of greatly impaired in that contary, and therefore, they asked us to recall him. It might be very unpleasant to withdow a Minister, but there were united much lors unpleasant turn that. It was not long since that we had a Minister kicked out of Madhad in consequence of a very unpleasant disstadilid in consequence of a very unpleasant dispatch from our present Fremier, which he had read chore, and if our Government said, "We won't result Mr. Crampton, because it is contrary to the dignity of this country," he (Mr. Bright) was of spinion, that it was contrary to the dignity of this country to violate the laws of the United States, and to take the course we had taken. No newscaper in England that he had seer, had denoted. Hear hear). But if we did not recall Mr. Crampton, the American Government would be in a different position. He observed an inselect article in the Economist, speaking of President Fierce as being only at the head of a chique, but when we put him into that position he would no longer be supported by a clique merely, but by the wide public opinion of the United States. We were in langer of getting into that position from which neither nation could retract without what they sailed loss of honor; and then we should see our which in either nation could retract without what they sailed loss of honor; and then we should see our which he chairman had spoken, become the view of the chairman had spoken and the structure of the s

AMERICAN RELATIONS IN PARLIAMENT. House or Commons, Feb. s .- Mr. Cobden again esked the Government whether there was may ob-ection to lay on the table the correspondence reting to our present relations with America. His reason for repeating the question was, that he did not think the reason that the noble Lori gave when he last put it, viz: "I hat the correspondence was not completed," was not founded on facts. Incre were two questions of difference with America—one upon the English and American Guarantee Convention for the construction of a canal across the Isthmus of Darien, which was signed in 1850, and had given rise to differences ever since, and the other was upon the matter of sulistment. Now he had reason to believe that the correspondence on the first subject was concluded, as it had oeen made public in America, and had been published in a pumphlet in England. It had been stated in the United States Service that the correspondence had been completed, and Lord Clarendra in the lent state. lon, in his last note to Mr. Buchanan ou the sub-cet, made a similar statement. Upon the subject of enlistment in America, Mr. Cobden, after commenting ou the folly of sending to a fine climate, where men were earning four shillings a day, to endeavor to get mon to enter our service to do duty in a bad climate for 1s. a day, remarked that in this case the Government had admitted its error, and it was absurd, therefore, to countenance the dispute. He submitted that the question might be discussed in that House, and that a way might there be peaceably found to settle the question. mittees, and sub-committees to two county electors, and send the names of all of two county electors, and send the names of the county said committees, and the usems of the county electors to the Chairman of this Committee, before the 22d day of March next, when this Committee the 22d day of March next, when this Committee will meet again at this place.

"Wisdom shall bor down to it, and the great of the earth hall kneel before it."

ILEVER COULD THIS BE SAID with more truth than it now applies to this remedy for affections of the threat and it units. The exalled in learning and power acknowledge its supremacy, while both the little and the great can feel its nenches. The liberal minded among those skilled to cure are free to own its mastery over distempers which have bailed their art. Those of exalted stuttions are not ashamed to testify to its virtues, but deem it a duty and a pleasure to thus hold out the lamp of their experience to their suffering fellow men.
